TOOLKIT 3

OVERVIEW

This educational toolkit has been created to encourage and inspire kids to take better care of one another and the environment too.

As part of the 'Mighty Kind Movement' – over the course of 5 short lessons, your students will learn all about recycling, upcycling, lifecycling and how to not just do kind things, but be kinder people too.

In order for teachers to bring this to life, here are some of the tools we've created:

- Five ready-to-go lesson plans and presentations teachers can use.
- A host of optional 'challenges' and classroom activities to really bring the lessons to life: including printable worksheets and three take-home resources.
- Optional posters, merchandise and other branded tools and toys to reinforce the message (available from our online shop).

Lesson Breakdown:

- Lesson 1: How to Reduce & Reuse
- Lesson 2: How to Recycle
- Lesson 3: How to Upcycle
- Lesson 4: How and Why to Lifecycle (organ donation)
- Lesson 5: How to Live Kinder, Bolder and More Creative Lives

Over the course of these lessons, students will learn:

- How and why to take better care of our planet
 - How and why to reduce their waste (Lesson 1)
 - How and why to recycle better (Lesson 2)
 - How and why to upcycle (Lesson 3)
- How to take better care of others
 - The benefits of lifecycling (Lesson 4)
 - How kindness and compassion can change the world (Lesson 5)

The end goal

Through fun, educational lessons and challenges, we hope to build an ever-growing, global movement of people committed to bringing more kindness and care into the world. One that:

- Inspires and equips children and their families to reduce, reuse and recycle their waste.
- Catalyzes and promotes more kindness within your classroom and beyond.
- Encourages children and parents to have some all-important conversations about organ donation.

IT'S CALLED THE MIGHTY KIND MOVEMENT – AND WE'RE ALL INVITED.

1. REDUCE & REUSE

2. RECYCLE

3. UPCYCLE

4. LIFECYCLE
(ORGAN DONOR)

5. LIVE KINDER, BOLDER
& MORE CREATIVELY

Five ways to make the world a mighty kinder place!

WHO ARE THE ORGAMITES?

The Organites are a team of 9 life-saving organs (led by Captain Marrow) found in every one of us.

They're known as the 'mighty organs' because they represent the most-donated parts of the body. These lovable characters help kids to connect with and appreciate the roles of their organs, whilst learning what organ transplantation and donation is all about.

But do we have to bring organ donation into it?

Around the world, in every country, there's a huge shortage of life-saving organs, especially for children, who tend to wait two and a half times longer than adults. Why the longer wait? This is partly because thousands of organs are not donated because most families don't talk about organ donation before it's too late.

Without making one's decision to donate clear, surviving family members are left unsure what their loved ones might have chosen and therefore (in the event of death) are unwilling to give consent to donate their loved one's organs. Only by having more open conversations about organ donation, can we hope to rectify this imbalance.

Via the freely-available take-home resources that schools are encouraged to send during the course of these lessons, more and more of these potentially life-saving conversations can take place where they should: within families, at home.

Why the Organites?

As the only global organ donation awareness programme of its kind, the Organites consists of an ever-growing range of educational tools – all aimed at breathing new life and lightness into all-important conversations.
